The future of Islam lies in Indonesia.

Is there hope for peace and justice between Islam and the West?

What do Muslims think about democracy and human rights, especially for women and non-Muslims?

Indonesia has the largest Muslim population in the world. How they handle radicalization and polarization may point the way for global Islam.

Please join us for a talk by and discussion with Bernard Adeney-Risakotta, author of Living in a Sacred Cosmos.

Dr. Adeney-Risakotta is founding director of the Indonesian Consortium for Religious Studies (ICRS) at Universitas Gadjah Mada in Yogyakarta. He studied in Wisconsin, London, and Berkeley, where he taught for nine years before moving to Indonesia in 1991.
